

Coconut Grove is one of the 30 coolest neighborhoods in the world

We polled 20,000 people from around the world to rank 2022's greatest places for fun, food, culture and community

It's no secret we're prone to a casual flex in this town, so let's not dance around it: Miami is popular. Like, objectively very cool. So cool, in fact, that one of our favorite neighborhoods in the city has just ranked number 29 on Time Out's list of the 51 coolest neighborhoods in the world in 2022.

Coconut Grove is the only Florida neighborhood to make this year's list, which is compiled annually by canvassing thousands of city-dwellers around the world in our Time Out Index survey. As usual, we asked (among other things) about the coolest spots in their city right now. And for the fifth year running, we combined their views with expert input from Time Out's global network of local editors and writers to publish our definitive ranking of the world's coolest neighborhoods.

So, how did Coconut Grove crack the top 30 this year? In case you haven't noticed, after more than a decade in flux, the Bahamian-influenced hippy enclave has once again become Miami's most exciting neighborhood. This is thanks, in part, to a spate of recently opened bars and restaurants, including new waterfront options and a Michelin star recipient. CocoWalk, its central open-air shopping mall, has also been entirely overhauled, complete with a new movie theatre and popular shops.

Still, what we love most about Coconut Grove is its homegrown charm. You'll find local art, an excellent farmers' market, Miami-bred chefs, historic members' clubs, a decades-old lemonade truck and a magnificent waterfront villa-turned-museum among the many reasons to visit.
